"Be ready to learn, and buy the book for your clients. Best coparenting education resources. Very useful information that can help working with families in conflict. Added benefit was the networking opportunity."

"Brad Craig has years of experience helping both professionals and parents understand best practices for working with children with two homes. His presentation is thorough and covers the many policy and practice implications of these family's' dynamics. Yet he is also warm and approachable, inviting questions and providing clarity. The result of this formula is that everyone can go home with some big ideas, and at least one thing they will use in their practice tomorrow."

"A+, great training, validating and reinforcing. Great specific illustration and how to tools. Excellent role modeling. Appreciate real life examples. I just love the speaker's style of presenting. Interesting, informative, knowledgeable. Positive communication skills, great sense of humor."

"Good ideas and techniques. Information about working with high conflict families. This would probably have made a good two day training to practice ideas. Excellent, I don't like most instructors, so it's really high praise."

"It was super, every single thing. Perfect mix of lecture, video, and humor."

"Very practical effective information for working with these types of high conflict cases. Great techniques to achieve success in communication. Good sense of humor and flow!"

"What an entertaining presenter. He maintained my interest throughout and challenged my thinking on many issues. Love it!"

"Mr. Craig had a confident and humorous speaking style that made his presentation educational and enjoyable. Very good information, thank you!"

"Very applicable and practical information without falling in to "touchy feely" language. Speaker was great at keeping class attention - dynamic and humorous."

Help for Raising
Children Between Two Homes

INTERVENTION BETWEEN TWO HOMES

A professional presentation on the latest standards of care, strength based language, ethical issues, Family Code legal matters, family dynamics, and tools for working with families raising children between two homes due to separation, divorce, or other family circumstances.

- Are you familiar with the updated requirements from your board when working with children whose parents have court orders?
- Are you familiar with the new reporting guidelines?
- If you are called to court, do you know your standards of practice for court connected cases?
- Are you familiar with the sanctions against mental health professionals who have been grieved for inappropriate actions with court connected cases, and the consequences?
- Are you familiar with the requirements for records release?
- Are you familiar with the differences between forensic vs. therapeutic roles, and the differences in recommendations to a court?

After this workshop, you will be.

Professionals in the mental health field commonly deal with children and families in crisis. With over half of all marriages in the United States ending in divorce, mental health professionals frequently find themselves involved in these complex family structures. Well-meaning professionals can be negatively impacted by this involvement if they are unaware of the specialized issues that come with the dynamics of these families and the potential Court interaction. Worse yet, this involvement can not only have long term damaging effects on your professional credibility, but as well on these children and their families.

This 5 hour on demand course presented by Bradley S. Craig, LMSW-IPR, CFLE author of Between Two Homes: A Coparenting Handbook offers participants the opportunity to familiarize themselves with the higher standard of practice involved in working with these families while learning about current research and knowledge regarding two homes issues. Options will also be presented on resources available to these families. Understand how maintaining an informed, up to date, and ethical practice can prevent the common mistakes seen regularly in work with these family structures and in the Family Courts.

"Very enthusiastic, knowledgeable, and entertaining speaker who engaged the audience but also kept the training on track. Brad kept our attention the whole day with his combination of conveying the seriousness of, and complexities involved in, our intervention with families while using a blend of humor and multimedia. Not only am I now better prepared to work with court while protecting my license, but I now have some new tools for my direct practice with families raising children between two homes."- Live Workshop Attendee
